

Centre for Local and Regional History, University of Essex

The Dudley White Local History Lecture 2016

Wednesday 4 May 2016, 7-8pm.

'Women and religious protest in 17th-century
Essex: campaigns against religious change in the 1630s and 1640s',

by Dr Amanda Flather, Department of History,
University of Essex.

Author of Gender and Space in Early Modern England (Boydell & Brewer 2011), Dr Flather is a leading historian of the social, cultural and religious history of 16th and 17th-century Essex.

In the Senate Room (4.722), Psychology Department Building, Square One, University of Essex, Colchester Campus, Wivenhoe Park, Colchester.

Car-parking and admission are FREE. The Senate Room will be signposted from the main visitors' car-park.