STUDENT HANDBOOK 2018-19

University of Essex
Welcome to the Department of History!

We all hope that you will enjoy your years at Essex, and find the Department a lively and friendly place in which to study. Please make full use of the Department facilities - History Common Room - and form part of the Department community.

This guide contains much of the information you will require during your time in the History Department, as well as some useful advice on, for example, writing and correctly referencing coursework. It is revised regularly, and we would welcome your comments on how it might be improved. In particular, let us know if you feel that we should incorporate new or additional material.

We hope you get the most for your studies at Essex, and we will try our hardest to ensure that you do.

Dr Mark R. Frost
Head of Department

About this handbook

This handbook gives you essential information about The Department of History and the University.

Other helpful sources of information are available at www.essex.ac.uk/myessex and www.essex.ac.uk/students. Our friendly departmental staff are also here to help and you can find their contact details in this handbook.

At our three uniquely intimate campuses we celebrate diversity and challenge inequality. Whatever your background, race or sexual orientation, you’re part of a vibrant community that lives, learns and plays together.
1. About our Department

Our Department was founded in 1972. Since then we have developed a strongly individual character. We pride ourselves on being a Department that refuses intellectual straitjackets. We enjoy the mix of areas and specialisms found along our corridors.

We have always been known for our friendly atmosphere, with good staff-student relationships and innovative teaching and learning methods that are reflected in consistently high student satisfaction ratings.

Our location and opening hours:

The Department of History can be accessed through entrance 4NE on square 4 with the Department’s offices located on levels 7 and 8. The main History Office, room 5NW.7.18, is open Monday-Friday, 10.00am-4.45pm (4.30pm on Fridays); closed for lunch between 1-2pm. Vacation opening times may vary.

Meet your department staff

Below is a summary of the roles of the staff you are likely to be in contact with most frequently. Find the full list of academic and administrative staff on our website at: www.essex.ac.uk/history/staff/.

Staff research interests
Our Department is internationally recognised for the quality of its research across a broad range of areas from 1450 to the present, ranging from social and cultural history to politics and international relations. Themes of particular interest in research include violence and protest, race, class formation, nationalism, cultural history, gender, and wars and revolutions. Details of staff research interests and their publications can be found at www.essex.ac.uk/history/staff/.

Your module tutor
All teaching staff hold regular weekly academic support hours during term-time. This is a time when you can go and see them about anything to do with your modules, from difficulties you might be having with your seminar readings to discussions about feedback on your coursework. It is fine to turn up at the academic support hour without an appointment. Details of academic support hours are posted on office doors and on the main History noticeboard. If you cannot make the advertised time for any reason, email your tutor to make an appointment.

Academic staff do not hold regular academic support hours during the vacations, and may well be away from the University on research trips. If you need to get in touch with them during the vacations, please email them in the first instance.

Your Personal Tutor
All students have a Personal Tutor who you’ll meet soon after you arrive and regularly throughout your course. Your Personal Tutor is there to help you feel connected to your department, and is someone you can talk to if you have questions about your course or encounter any difficulties which affect your studies. Your Personal Tutor may also recommend other support services on campus that might be able to help. Professor Lucy Noakes, the Graduate Director Taught, is the Personal Tutor for all MA Taught students.

Graduate Director Taught
The Graduate Director Taught is the member of staff responsible for the smooth running of taught postgraduate schemes. He/she is the first ‘port of call’ for any general enquiries. The Graduate Director Taught helps students in the initial stages of selecting a suitable subject and supervisor for the MA dissertation.

The Graduate Director Taught can also advise you on related practical or personal matters, or matters relating to the University’s formal requirements. He/she can be contacted in person during academic support hours, or by email or telephone.
If the Graduate Director Taught is unable to help you, you may contact the Director of Education.

More about the Department

Postgraduate Lockers
Lockers are available in the History Common Room for postgraduate students. These are allocated on a first-come first-served basis. If you are allocated a locker it will be necessary for you to supply your own padlock. Please speak to Lisa Willis in the History Department Office if you are interested in using a locker.

Postgraduate Training
Taught students are provided with structured training throughout their scheme of study. The Department offers a wide range of postgraduate taught modules that either explore particular fields and concepts, or offer specific training in research methods and skills. Students should peruse the modules available and discuss with the Graduate Director Taught which of these modules would be suitable.

Publications
Copies of the following reference books are available from the History Department Office and may be borrowed for short periods of time.

A useful publication is the MHRA Style Book, which is obtainable from the University Bookshop. The final version of your MA dissertation or research thesis should conform as strictly as possible to the guidelines laid down in this publication (London: Modern Humanities Research Association, 2002).

Grants for History - guide to funding specifically for historians and the history discipline (University of London: Institute of Historical Research, 2013).
History Common Room
The History Common Room (5NW.7.1) is located on the same corridor as the History Office, and is for the use of students (both undergraduate and postgraduate) and staff. The Guardian is delivered daily during term-time, and there is a drinks machine. This is where you will also find the student photocopier, a computer for student use, and the History Society and general noticeboards.

Student Photocopier/Scanner
The Department provides a photocopier, for the use of all students, located in the History Common Room. Copy cards can be purchased in the History Office. A copy card costs £2 and provides credit for 40 A4 copies (5p per copy). The copier also has a scanning facility where you can scan documents to your own email address, free of charge.

Noticeboards
A list of academic staff and their contact details and location of seminar rooms is posted on the noticeboards situated on Level 7 near the History Office and the Common Room. Other noticeboards on Levels 7 and 8 have information on Careers, Seminars and Public Lectures, the Local History Centre and ‘miscellaneous’ information, and an Essex Experience noticeboard.

Communication
The Department uses email for routine communication between staff and students. A system of email groups allows members of staff to send messages simultaneously to groups of students (e.g. all students registered for a particular module), so even if you have not divulged your email address, you may well receive messages. It is, therefore, vital that you check your Essex email regularly, ideally once a day.

As a matter of courtesy, please follow these general expectations about the use of emails:

- The level of formality: if you are writing to your lecturer for the first time, please use a relatively formal manner and make sure you have checked their title, for example ‘Dear Dr Jones’ or ‘Dear Professor Smith’. If your lecturer signs their reply using their first name, then you can use their first name in your next message; if not, stick with the formal address.

- Identify yourself: in the first few weeks our academic staff will still be busy getting to know all their students. Please identify yourself, for example, by saying ‘I’m taking HR100 and was at your lecture about Vietnam on Tuesday morning’ and use your Essex email which will give your full name to the recipient.

- Consider your question: are you writing to the most appropriate person (lecturer, seminar leader, personal tutor, administrative staff) or could your query be resolved by, for example, checking the University website, your student Handbook, the Department Moodle pages or by contacting a subject librarian.

Remember, if you have a question which is likely to require a longer or more detailed answer, it might be quicker and more useful to see someone in person. The History Office is open daily and all staff hold academic support hours when you can just drop in. Of course, you can also email beforehand to make an appointment.

| Research Seminars | The Department arranges and hosts research seminars by both Essex and other university academics, on a wide variety of historical themes. These usually consist of a fairly informal paper about work-in-progress, followed by extensive discussion, which invariably continues over drinks in the bar or in the History Common Room. The seminars are an excellent way to meet staff as well as students, both undergraduate and postgraduate. Members of the public are also welcome to attend. For more details please see the History website. |

| Postgraduate conferences | The Department holds regular one-day postgraduate conferences. The Essex conference is an important forum for research students to meet and discuss their work in a constructive setting and all students in the Department are encouraged to get involved in similar events in the future. |

| History Society | The History Society is run by students and is a great way to get to know people in the Department, going beyond lectures and seminars. If themed socials, quizzes, day trips, pizza & movie nights, workshops and talks interest you then the History Society is for you! We will be offering all of these events over the coming year and look forward to involving our new and returning members in them. As well as this there will be the opportunity to get involved with volunteer projects and help run the Society. |

If you have any suggestions, email the History Society via email soc@histsoc.com or you may find them in the Common Room (find out who they are at https://www.essexstudent.com/organisation/6722/).
2. About your course

Learning and teaching methods
There are essentially three modes of teaching at postgraduate level. Most teaching is through small group seminars, groups ranging from 5-12 students with discussion led by the seminar teacher but often with short presentations by students. One module, Research Methods in History, is designed to introduce students to a range of research methods, and can have greater numbers and follows a different format. Finally, there is teaching through dissertation supervisory sessions. This teaching – like student consultation about coursework – is entirely individual. It involves consultations with a supervisor, as well as critical discussion of draft chapters and comments on them by the supervisor. This particular mode of teaching largely takes place in the summer term and vacation and is fundamental to honing students’ research and writing skills.

You will find that you are expected to work more independently than during your undergraduate degree; this is both a reflection of the higher level of study and preparation for those wishing to continue to a PhD.

The University is committed to providing equal opportunities for all our students regardless of where or how you study. Our diverse student population is taken into account when developing the resources, services and facilities on and off campus, when we create our courses, write publications and course materials, and set our policies and regulations. Where appropriate, reasonable adjustments will be made for individual students to support them through their studies.

Your timetable
Once you have chosen all your modules and received confirmation, they will appear on your personal timetable. Your individual timetable can be found at www.essex.ac.uk/students. You may find that the first week of your timetable is blank if you do not have any course commitments in Welcome Week. You can also access your timetable on most mobile devices including smart phones and tablets. There may be unavoidable room changes during the year, so be alert for notices of last minute alterations, especially in the first couple of weeks. If you have any timetable difficulties you can report these through the online timetable links.

Course structures
Each course involving History has its own syllabus, full details of which are given in the Programme Specifications Catalogue (http://www.essex.ac.uk/programmespecs/). Your own course structure can be found in the myStudy section of your myEssex homepage. The Department offers the following Certificate and MA courses in History:

- History
- History (Cultural and Social History Pathway)
- History (Local and Regional History Pathway)
- History (Public History Pathway)
Changing your degree
Students wishing to discuss the possibility of changing course should speak to the Graduate Administrator or Graduate Director Taught.

If you are thinking about changing course, we recommend that you speak to someone in your school/department as soon as possible. They will be able to advise you if there are any specific requirements for the course you are looking to change to. If the course you are looking to change to is within a different school/department, then you should also speak to someone in that department.

There are deadlines in place for when you need to change course by, so please make sure you are aware of these deadlines before requesting to change. Further details on changing course and the relevant deadlines can be found at www.essex.ac.uk/students/course-admin/changing-course.aspx or by visiting your Student Services Hub. Investigate your potential new course by looking at course information on the department’s web pages, talking to students on the course and speaking to tutors. You should also look at our Rules of Assessment for the new course to check whether there are any course-specific requirements.

If you want to change your mode of study from full-time to part-time, you should discuss this with our departmental staff. If this is possible, you will need to make a formal request using the online Change of Mode of Study form which you can find here: www.essex.ac.uk/esf/

Changing your mode of study may affect your immigration status and you may need to contact the Home Office or make a new Tier 4 application.

Please read carefully our guidance on visas and course changes here: www.essex.ac.uk/immigration/studies/changes

If you want to make a formal request for a course change, you should do so via the online Course Change form available here: www.essex.ac.uk/esf/

Programme specifications
Programme Specifications provide key information, such as the structure and aims of your course, as well as the knowledge and skills you will develop. The relevant Programme Specification for your course and stage of study will be available to you when you log onto myEssex.

Learning outcomes
Your course’s learning outcomes are set out in Programme Specifications. They are categorised into knowledge, intellectual, practical and key skills, and are linked to the aims, learning outcomes and assessment on the modules you take. You can measure your progress against the outcomes, for example when reviewing coursework feedback, and they can be used to guide you when undertaking independent study. You can find a copy of the module map showing how your course learning outcomes are connected to the modules on the History website.

Full module outlines are available from the History Office or Moodle.
Module information

Most modules taught in the Department reflect the individual research interests of members of the academic staff. New modules are regularly introduced. In their optional modules, students learn to apply specific approaches to history (e.g. social, economic, cultural, and political) and may make their own choices of particular periods, problems or countries. Their choices will, naturally, be governed by the syllabus they are following and also by the availability of modules.

Module Directors are responsible for the individual modules, which make up courses. They design the modules, teach them and examine them. They monitor student progress and talk to students about any academic issues related to their particular module.

| Module Directory | Module details including outlines and assessment information can be found in the online Module Directory www.essex.ac.uk/modules/.
| Module Choice and Enrolment | Students registered on programmes of study leading to a degree may have options to select as part of their course structure. The eNROL system is an online tool to review and select available modules specific to a particular course and year of study. All new and returning students should use the online system prior to the start of each academic year. Returning students will access the system from the April preceding the next academic year. New students will access the system from the end of August. Departments will approve student selections within a few weeks of eNROL use and timetables will take module enrolment into account when planning for the next academic year. Early module enrolment will ensure students know which modules to attend and where the lectures and classes are held.
| Changing Modules | Students wishing to discuss the possibility of changing modules should speak to Lisa Willis and/or the Graduate Director Taught. Students may change modules during the first two weeks of term with the permission of the Graduate Director Taught and the new module tutor. After the first two weeks, students will not normally be permitted to change modules.
| Module Materials | Module reading lists will be available through Talis Aspire (https://essex.rl.talis.com/index.html) and on Moodle. Essay lists will also be on Moodle.
| Listen Again | All postgraduate modules are seminar-based and therefore not available on Listen Again. If you miss any classes, arrange to meet your seminar leader to discuss what you have missed, how to catch up and to pick up any handouts.
| Training and Optional Modules | Postgraduate courses consist of a number of compulsory training modules and some optional modules. For all courses students must be assessed on five modules (which vary according to the degree scheme). For most schemes these are made up of two compulsory training modules and three optional modules (or four, if the student is assessed on one training module only). A typical History module consists of ten seminars, and modules are usually taught weekly in either the autumn or spring term.

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Assessed Modules</th>
<th>For most assessed modules students are required to do the necessary reading; prepare for and attend each weekly seminar; take part in each seminar discussion; and submit an essay. Different forms of assessment apply to the Research Methods in History.</th>

<td>When students audit a module they are required to do the necessary reading; prepare for and attend each weekly seminar; take part in each seminar discussion; but are not required to submit an essay.</td>

| Skills           | Having completed a course successfully, students will have acquired the following skills:
• the ability to gather and assimilate large amounts of information and data;
• the critical analysis of such material for deployment in a reasoned argument;
• fluent and lucid communication, both oral and written;
• self-discipline and self-direction;
• the ability to work with others. |
| Award documents  | As your studies draw to a close, and once your exam board has met, it takes up to five working days for your results to be confirmed. You will be sent an email to inform you when the results are live on a password protected web page. Graduating students will receive a degree certificate at Graduation.
You can find the publication schedule here:
www.essex.ac.uk/students/exams-and-coursework/schedule.aspx |

Assessment

Methods of Assessment
Except where otherwise specified (see individual course syllabus and requirements) each student must submit one essay for each assessed module. Please note: for any module not assessed by a single essay, arrangements for assessment and deadlines will be communicated via the module tutor and/or History postgraduate noticeboards.

Students are expected to agree each essay title with the module tutor in advance of the coursework deadline. History essays should be 5,000 words in length.
Postgraduate Certificate Coursework
The Postgraduate Certificate is made up of five taught modules, each with a credit weighting of 20 credits. Postgraduate Certificate students submit coursework for four assessed modules, usually consisting of one 5,000-word essay, although some modules may require more than one piece of work to be submitted. In addition students submit a dissertation proposal of 1,500 words for the training module Research Methods in History which is assessed on a pass/fail basis.

In the case of Modular Study students, the coursework for each module has normally to be marked at the pass level before the student can proceed to the next module. A student may, however, be permitted to proceed once only with a module marked below 40 per cent.

MA Coursework
The MA is made up of five taught modules, each with a credit weighting of 20 credits, plus the dissertation with a credit weighting of 80 credits. Some of the modules are core, which must be taken and passed to gain the qualification. Some of the modules are compulsory, that is, they must be taken but a failure to pass them can be condoned in certain circumstances. The pass make for MA coursework is 50 per cent.

MA students submit four essays of 5,000 words, one for each module, which they are assessed on, plus a dissertation of 20,000 words. In addition they submit a dissertation proposal of 1,500 words for the training module Research Methods in History. The assessment for the training module Research Methods must be at the pass level.

In the case of Modular Study students the coursework for each module should normally be marked at the pass level before they can proceed to the next module. A student may, however, be permitted to proceed once only, when a module has been marked between 40 and 49 per cent.

Please see the section on Academic guidance and information, later in this booklet, for details of the assessment policies and regulations that apply to your course. The section Support information contains information about the range of academic and personal support available to you to in addition to that provided by your Department.

Equality and Diversity
The University of Essex recognises the value of diversity and is committed to equality of opportunity within the University. It therefore aims to create the conditions whereby students and staff are treated with dignity and respect and solely on the basis of their merits, abilities and potential, regardless of, race, ethnic or national origin, gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, disability, age, socio-economic background, family circumstances, religious or political beliefs and affiliations or other irrelevant distinction.

The University is committed to a programme of action to ensure that this policy is fully effective. If you have any comments/questions on equal opportunities at the University please e-mail equalopps@essex.ac.uk
Coursework

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Coursework Submission</th>
<th>History coursework must be submitted online via FASER by 12:00 noon on the published deadline date for the module. We have a single policy at the University of Essex on the late submission of coursework: all coursework submitted after the deadline will receive a mark of zero. A student submitting coursework late will have the University’s and department’s arrangements for late submission drawn to their attention. The policy states that the mark of zero shall stand unless you submit satisfactory evidence of extenuating circumstances that indicate that you were unable to submit the work by the deadline.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
| Assignments and Deadlines | In order to make sure that you submit an assignment by the deadline you must be organised and start the work for your assignment well in advance of the deadline. You must allow yourself time to find and read the necessary books and articles, to think about and plan your assignment, to read and think some more, and then to write up your assignment.

All deadline dates will be announced at the start of the academic year by module teachers and published on the History noticeboard.

Producing assignments to specified deadlines throughout the academic year is an important aspect of the educational experience of doing your degree. It develops your ability to plan and organise your own work and time efficiently, and enables you to apply lessons learnt in the writing of assignments earlier in the year to those written later in the year. The reasons for having a strict system of deadlines (see paragraph below on Coursework Deadline Policy) are:

- to reinforce the importance of meeting deadlines;
- to ensure that no students have an unfair advantage in taking longer to do their assignments than others; and
- to ensure that staff members are able to use their time for marking assignments as efficiently as possible and in a way which is most beneficial to all students.

You should allow ample time for typing your essay in case things go wrong with computers, WiFi, etc. Do ensure that you back up your work regularly to another location, e.g. memory stick. Remember also that if you have a deadline then so do lots of other students and that pressure on resources increases, the closer the deadline looms. |
| Essay Writing | Please refer to Appendix A: Guide to Writing Coursework. This guide will help when you write essays and other similar pieces of coursework and outlines the use of quotations, referencing, footnotes, stylistic advice and much more. |
| Referencing | Drawing on the wide range of reading you do around your subject area, and demonstrating how you have used this to develop your knowledge and form your own views, is a key aspect of your coursework. It is essential that you reference your source materials so it’s clear where the information has come from, and to avoid any misunderstanding over whether you are presenting ideas as your own. Please refer to Appendix A: Guide to Writing Coursework for information on referencing and where to seek advice. |
| Presentation | Students should follow the style guidelines provided in the Guide to Essay Writing in Appendix A of this Handbook. It is particularly important that coursework be correctly presented as follows:
  - use a minimum font size of 11pt
  - double-spaced text, except long quotations, footnotes and the bibliography
  - quotations of more than four lines should be single spaced and indented
  - footnotes and bibliography should be double-spaced between each item
  - margins: top and left = 3 centimetres; bottom and right = 2 centimetres
  - all pages numbered

We strongly advise everyone to print out a paper copy of each essay for proofreading and correcting before submitting the essay electronically. As any experienced writer will confirm, you are much more likely to spot errors and weaknesses in your own writing when you see it on paper, than when you see it on a screen. |
| Progression to the Dissertation | Students are required to complete their coursework before proceeding to the dissertation. To be allowed to proceed to the dissertation three out of the five modules must be passed. Failure with a mark of 40 or more for up to 40 credits in non-core taught modules will be condoned provided the overall weight average for the taught module is 50. Students who do not meet this requirement will not be permitted to proceed to the dissertation.

Students who have failed any taught module may have a second attempt for module(s) that have been failed, up to a maximum of 40 taught module credits. The maximum mark that may be recorded for a module as a result of a second attempt is 50.

Please see the PGT rules of assessment which are published on the web for further details relating to progression, awards and reassessment opportunities. |
Marking, feedback and results

Marking scale
The Department of History adopts the following numerical scale to assess all postgraduate coursework and dissertations with the exception of the training module Research Methods in History:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Marks</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>70 or above</td>
<td>= MA distinction standard</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>60-69</td>
<td>= MA merit standard</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>50-59</td>
<td>= MA pass standard</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>40-49</td>
<td>= Fail, condonable if one module only</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>less than 40</td>
<td>= Fail</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

Mark criteria
Senate requires that all Departments inform their students of the specific criteria for their marking ranges. In an essay-based discipline such as History, grade descriptions can be, at best, suggestive; judgement must include a subjective element that cannot be quantified. However, members of the Department have provided the following indicators for the respective marks:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Marks</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>80+</td>
<td>A truly outstanding performance covering everything one would hope to find in an answer, and based on wide, critical reading. Well organised, well-expressed and having overwhelming originality and flare. Excellent and striking work of a publishable standard shedding new light on the field, richly researched and theoretically sophisticated.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>75-79</td>
<td>A very strong distinction. As well as being comprehensive, such an answer must show that the candidate has synthesised and analysed the material necessary to engage with the question directly, and to fit the points he or she wants to make. Marked originality in approach and ideas is required. An exceptional performance.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>70-74</td>
<td>A solid distinction. Well structured and written, with a wide coverage of the literature. Evident originality in approach, ideas, and methodology. A high standard of excellence in terms of argument and presentation.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>60-69</td>
<td>Well structured and argued, with a good literature review that connects well with theoretical development and/or methodological analysis. Clear understanding and critical engagement with ideas and methods.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>50-59</td>
<td>Good, competent account, with a structured argument, and a decent coverage of literature. Shows a respectable grasp of key issues and the ability to analyse. An adequate scholarly apparatus.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>40-49</td>
<td>Fail, but condonable in one module only, if all other modules are passes.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
Insufficient engagement with the question for an MA pass. Relatively unreflective use of literature, with gaps in the analysis. Modest depth of analysis. Issues with scholarly apparatus and literary style.

0-39 Fail. Does not engage with the question, and fundamental problems with the structure and argument. Serious gaps in reading and analysis. Deficiencies in the literary style and a lack of a proper scholarly apparatus, which make the piece difficult to follow and to verify evidence.

Clarification of Marking Criteria

- Some of the terms used in the need to be clarified in order to ensure that students and markers understand the distinction between a ‘good’ and ‘poor’ piece of work.

- Critical reading/engagement: this relates to how one has understood the issues and ideas raised in the historiography of a subject. A good piece of work will show that the student has understood the issues and ideas raised in secondary works, and can see how the ideas and evidence of different authors support, refute, or modify each other. Critical insight is shown when the student does not parrot what he or she has read but uses primary and secondary sources to provide support for such ideas, or to refute and modify them.

- Originality: this is when a piece of work illuminates a subject in a new way. This may relate to such things as the investigation of an unusual subject, the generation of new conceptual models, or the application of existing ideas to a field of research where they have not been applied before.

- Publishable: a piece of work is of such quality that it could be the basis of a submission to a learned journal or academic publisher. This does not mean that the piece would necessarily be published as it stands but could be so with a reasonable amount of editing.

- Reflection: this relates to evidence that the student has not only read something but has asked his or herself what it means, how it could be related to their subject matter, and how it is linked to other reading.

- Scholarly apparatus: this shows the sources of the ideas and evidence from which the piece of work has been constructed, especially through footnotes and the bibliography. Those reading the essay or dissertation should be able to locate such sources easily. The footnotes and bibliography should follow the conventions set out in this handbook.

- Sophisticated: a sophisticated approach is one that is aware of the various ways of attacking the subject under discussion, and which is able to craft arguments and use evidence in a way that allows understanding of the topic considered. But an approach that does not use particular approaches slavishly, and is aware of their limitations.
• Structured argument: the argument should progress logically through the text, and the relevance of the material being covered to the original questions posed should be made evident as the argument unfolds. The piece of work should not read as a collection of disparate thoughts or disjointed sections.

• Synthesised and analysed: information and ideas should be brought together and linked to create a coherent argument, which shows that the student has understood the information and ideas, and their relevance to the task at hand.

Anonymous marking in coursework policy

All coursework which contributes to your final module mark should be marked anonymously where it is practical to do so; where this is not possible, departments will inform you in advance of the assessment task. www.essex.ac.uk/quality/university_policies/default.asp

Return of Marked Coursework

Seminar teachers will mark assignments and provide feedback, within a maximum of 20 working days of the deadline.

Right of Appeal for Re-marking

You have the right to request a re-mark of your coursework under certain circumstances which your department will advise you on. The University Marking Policy can be found here: www.essex.ac.uk/quality/university_policies/examination_and_assessment/marking_policy. You will need to complete a form and be aware that marks can go down as well as up.

Moderation, second marking policies and External Examiners

The University policy on moderation can be found as part of the Marking Policy. When work is moderated, it means that a second member of academic staff takes a random sample of the work for a particular assessment and reviews the marks given. A moderator would not change the individual marks for the work, but would liaise with the first marker to agree whether marks should be reviewed across the particular piece of assessment or module, which may lead to marks being adjusted.

Second marking is where a second marker marks the work but has access to the first marker’s marks and/or comments.

External Examiners are usually academics from other universities but may be from industry, business or the profession depending on the requirements of the course. They give an impartial view of the course and independent advice to ensure that courses at the University meet the academic standards expected across UK higher education. External Examiners write reports on the courses and modules they are responsible for which are made available to you via your department. You can find the name and institution of the External Examiner for your course and modules by looking on the Programme Specifications Catalogue and the Module Directory. You can find out more about how the University uses External Examiners by following this link: www.essex.ac.uk/quality/external_examiners
Please note: you may not contact External Examiners directly under any circumstances. If you have any concerns about the quality and standards of your course, please contact your student rep, your Head of Department or the Students’ Union

TAUGHT MA DISSERTATIONS

The dissertation is a very important part of an MA course. In all MA courses students are required to take the module HR935 Research Methods in History. This module helps with preparation for the dissertation.

Commencing Work on the Dissertation
All full-time and part-time students are required to commence work on their dissertation during the spring term of their first year. Modular Study students are required to commence work on their dissertation during their penultimate year.

It is necessary that by the end of week 25 of the spring term of the relevant academic year all students must have:

1 decided and agreed a dissertation topic with the Graduate Director Taught;
2 agreed dates for supervision sessions over the spring and summer terms with their dissertation supervisor;
3 agreed the timetable for submission of draft chapters with their dissertation supervisor;
4 submitted a 1,500-word dissertation proposal to the History Department Office (Lisa Willis), unless their assessment for module HR935 is a proposal for their dissertation.

Dissertation Supervisors
At the beginning of the spring term the Graduate Director Taught will ask students to decide on their dissertation topic. Once decided, the Graduate Director Taught allocates a Dissertation Supervisor to each student. Dissertation supervisors allocated are normally History Department staff but where the subject is appropriate, staff from other departments may be invited as to act as supervisors.

Permission to Proceed to the Dissertation
To be allowed to proceed to the dissertation stage of the degree the majority of a student’s coursework must be marked at MA pass standard. Please refer to the Assessment Procedures for Taught Students section for more details. The formal decision as to whether to allow a student to proceed will be made at the Examinations Board meeting which takes place at the end of summer-term of each year or every final year. This meeting discusses whether the student has sufficient coursework marks and has submitted a dissertation proposal.

Word Length
Students will be asked to sign a declaration indicating the word length of their dissertation, which should not exceed 20,000 words. The word length refers to the text of the dissertation. Therefore it does not include appendices, bibliographies etc, or footnotes (provided that in the latter case the footnotes stand alone and thus do not form an intrinsic part of the argument of the dissertation).
The Department reserves the right to return any dissertation, which is over the specified word length, for condensing.

Presentation
A useful publication is the MHRA Style Book, which is obtainable from the University Bookshop. A copy of this publication can also be borrowed from the History Department Office. The final version of your MA dissertation or research thesis should conform as strictly as possible to the guidelines laid down in this publication (London: Modern Humanities Research Association, 1981). www.mhra.org.uk/Publications/Books/StyleGuide/

It is most important that your dissertation be correctly presented as follows:

- the Department will fund the printing of two final copies of the dissertation at the University’s Copy Shop on Square 4;
- set margins as follows: top and left = four centimetres; bottom and right = two centimetres;
- include a title page giving your name, the degree scheme title, the dissertation title, and year submitted;
- include a contents page;
- include a page with the following acknowledgement ‘I gratefully acknowledge the help of my supervisor in matters of style and substance’;
- quotations, footnotes, captions to illustrations, etc may be in single spacing;
- footnotes may be at the foot of the relevant page or placed at the end of the dissertation together with the bibliography and any appendices. For more specific information regarding referencing in footnotes and your bibliography please see sections below;
- you are reminded that it is ESSENTIAL to read through the dissertation after it has been typed to remove any typographical or other errors before submission.

Deadline for Submission
The University deadline for submitting MA dissertations is 12th September. If this falls on a weekend then submission must be on the Friday before the 12th.

In the case of students taking the MA on the basis of modular study, the dissertation should be submitted by 12th September in the final year of their degree, or in the fifth year succeeding, at the very latest.

Applying for an Extension
Requests for extensions must be made to the relevant Dean, in advance of the University deadline. Extensions going beyond this deadline can be given only by the Dean of Postgraduate Research and Education, on the recommendation of the Graduate Director Taught, and only in the case of (documented) illness or comparable personal emergency.

If you are granted an extension please let the History Office (Lisa Willis) know (in advance of the original deadline) by which date your dissertation will be submitted.
Submission of Dissertations
When you submit your dissertation please remember:

• To complete and submit a Submission of Dissertation form - please ask the administrative staff for this form.
• Two copies of the dissertation must be submitted in the specified form above.
• Please ensure that you forwarding address is up to date via your myEssex.

Marking of Dissertations
The dissertation is assessed by two internal examiners, one of which is normally the student’s supervisor, and then by the External Examiner. Marks are then considered by the Examination Board, which usually meets in Week 8. After this meeting, students will be asked to collect one copy of their dissertation, and the Department will retain one copy.

Resubmission of Dissertations
Re-submission of dissertations is only permitted in the following circumstances:

i. Either substantiated extenuating circumstances accepted at the discretion of the Board of Examiners; or
ii. Where the original mark awarded is at least 40 and the work required does not include any additional experimental or practical work.

Re-submission is subject to the following conditions:

i. A dissertation must normally be re-submitted within two months of the formal notification of permission to resubmit; in cases of extenuating circumstances, this may be extended to a maximum of twelve months;
ii. Permission to resubmit will not be given where the Board of Examiners judges that the work required would include additional experimental or practical work.
iii. A dissertation which has been re-submitted because of a marginal fail shall be awarded no more than the minimum pass mark; in the case of re-submissions because of extenuating circumstances, the full range of marks shall be available to examiners.

Department annual prizes
The Department awards prizes annually in the form of vouchers or money. The prizes are presented at the Graduation Reception.

1) The MA Dissertation Prize is awarded to the MA History student deemed by the Board of Examiners in History to have written the best dissertation.
2) The John S Appleby Prize is awarded to the MA History student deemed by the Board of Examiners in History to have written the best dissertation on Essex or local history.

Graduation
The culmination of all your hard work, Graduation ceremonies take place at our Colchester Campus each July in the Ivor Crewe Lecture Hall. All eligible students studying at our Colchester, Loughton and Southend Campuses will be invited to attend. For more information visit our graduation pages: www.essex.ac.uk/students/graduation
Student and staff expectations
It will help both staff and students if they can try to meet the following expectations.

What Students Can Expect from their Teachers
• for each module, a description with aims and objectives, a reading list and assessment rules;

• a series of well-prepared seminars, the themes for which are clearly indicated in the module description;

• to be informed at least two weeks in advance if they are expected to make a seminar presentation;

• that coursework submitted on time will normally be returned within 20 working days of the relevant coursework deadline;

• that comments will be provided on or with coursework. These comments will normally offer a broad rationale for the mark awarded and where possible suggest some direction for further development. The length of comments will vary but will usually be about 50-100 words;

• that members of staff will be available to see students during academic support hours, the times of which will be publicised;

• that students will be informed of any last minute changes to the timetable (e.g. due to teacher’s illness) via email or text message.

• that members of staff will normally reply to emails within two working days during term-time and a week out of term-time, unless otherwise indicated;

• In addition, for supervision of postgraduate taught MA dissertations:
  - full-time, second-year part-time and final year modular studies students can expect to see their supervisor on at least two occasions during the summer term;
  - to have their dissertation read and commented on in draft form, provided it is submitted by an agreed date;
  - to be provided with initial bibliographic assistance on their agreed dissertation;
  - to be given guidance on the general structure of the dissertation itself.
What Teachers Can Expect from their Students

- that students arrive punctually, and attend regularly, seminars. In the event of an absence an explanation is expected in advance of the seminar;

- that students should arrange a meeting, at the beginning of the relevant term, with each of their module tutors to discuss individual module requirements;

- that any required reading has been completed before the relevant seminar;

- that a sufficient amount of time is spent each week reading and preparing for each module, including the writing of coursework;

- that students participate actively in seminars and honour commitments to produce work for a seminar, including presentations;

- that students discuss and agree an essay title for each module with their module tutor, in advance of the relevant coursework deadline;

- That students do not use mobile phones in class unless relevant to the discussion;

- that coursework is submitted on time, in a word-processed format with a completed coversheet attached;

- that all coursework is properly documented, cites all sources used and is the student’s own work;

- that students be familiar with the Departmental Student Handbook, and the rules contained therein, particularly relating to essay writing and submission;

- In addition, for taught MA students, it is necessary that by the end of week 25 of the spring term of the relevant academic year all students must have:
  - decided and agreed a dissertation topic with the Graduate Director Taught;
  - agreed dates for supervision sessions over the spring and summer terms with their dissertation supervisor;
  - agreed the timetable for submission of draft chapters with their dissertation supervisor;
  - submitted a 1,500-word dissertation proposal to the Graduate Administrator.
3. Academic guidance and regulations

Your progress

Our University is committed to excellence in education, and to supporting your progression and achievement as an Essex student. Regular monitoring of student attendance allows us to identify any students who may need guidance or support, to help them to succeed in their studies. Your engagement with your programme of study is primarily measured by attendance, and completion of, and performance in, assessments, as appropriate. We monitor attendance and will follow-up concerns about any student in accordance with the University’s Progress Procedures at: https://www.essex.ac.uk/about/governance/policies. As a student, if engagement in your studies, as measured by attendance and/or submission of assessed work, is unsatisfactory you’ll be contacted and offered guidance and support. If your progress causes concerns you’ll initially be contacted by your Personal Tutor, and then by the departmental progress officer. Where serious concerns persist, you may be referred to the Deputy Dean Education and your case formally considered by a Progress Committee.

Attendance monitoring (Count-me-in) and absence from sessions

Your attendance at lectures and classes has a significant impact on how successful you are in your studies. At Essex, we monitor attendance so we can identify students who may need guidance and support.

You’ll need to record your attendance at teaching events using the electronic reader in the teaching room. Just ‘tap in’ for every timetabled teaching event you attend.

You should not tap in for someone who is not attending the class; and also you should not tap in if you then immediately leave the teaching event. This may result in disciplinary action being taken against you.

If you lose your card or it is faulty, go to the Student Services Hub to get a new card (a fee may be applicable). If you attend a teaching event but are unable to record your attendance as you don’t have your registration card, you should speak to a member of administrative staff in your department. In the case of a lost card, your department will normally record you as present for up to seven days.

For more information on attendance, and for links to forms and guidelines visit: www.essex.ac.uk/students/course-admin/attendance.aspx

If you need to report an absence from a teaching event, test or exam due to medical reasons, representing the University in British Universities and Colleges Sport (BUCS) competitions, or in regional, national or international competitions; being selected or training for a national sports team e.g. Home Nationals or Great Britain, on a University organised placement, or other circumstances you should do so by completing the relevant form in myEssex for a notified... absence. Your department consider the reasons and may record it as an authorised absence. Be aware that you may need to provide evidence, including medical evidence if relevant.

Please contact your Personal Tutor, department staff or the Student Services Hub for advice and support, particularly if you are going to be absent for several weeks.

LEAP (Learner Engagement Activity Portal)

Learner Engagement Activity Portal is our student centered, personalised engagement tool. LEAP focuses on what you do rather than who you are. It's expected that the more engaged you are with your studies the more likely you are to achieve your academic goals.

LEAP calculates and shows you your average engagement for the last seven days based on your usage of each university resource (FASER, Moodle and Listen Again as well as attendance and University computer logins). By providing you with this information, we hope to empower you to become more effective, independent learners and achieve your study goals.

Log into LEAP via Pocket Essex, My Essex or leap.essex.ac.uk.

Rules of assessment
www.essex.ac.uk/students/exams-and-coursework/ppg/pgt/assess-rules.aspx

The Rules of Assessment are the rules, principles and frameworks which the University uses to calculate your course progression and final results. Some departments also have variations to the main rules, which you can find listed on our website above. If you have questions about whether a variation applies to you, contact your department.

Each module you will take will have a credit value which you are awarded if you successfully complete the module. You need to obtain a certain amount of credits to be awarded your degree, and the Rules of Assessment give you more information about this.

These decisions are made by the Board of Examiners who use the Rules of Assessment to decide:

- you can be awarded credit for the modules you have studied
- you have done enough to move on to the next stage of your course (if you are on a course which lasts more than one year)
- you need reassessment
- whether you have done enough to pass your course
- whether you are eligible to receive a merit or distinction

The following is only a summary of the key points. You should read the rules and make sure you understand them. If you need advice, ask your personal tutor, departmental administrator, or SU Advice.

If you fail your course you are not able to repeat it. The Rules of Assessment for Postgraduate Taught Awards only allow reassessment for up to a maximum of 60 credits worth of modules for taught masters degrees. The Board of Examiners will inform you if you are eligible for reassessment once it has considered your marks.

If you fail your dissertation you may be permitted by the Board of Examiners to resubmit your work, provided you meet the criteria as set out in the Rules of Assessment for Postgraduate Taught Awards. Alternatively, if you have obtained enough credits in your taught modules, you may be eligible for another award such as a postgraduate diploma or certificate.

You can decide if you want to accumulate credit by taking individual modules with the aim of achieving a postgraduate award; this is called Modular study. There are opportunities to achieve postgraduate awards through credit accumulation study in an increasing number of departments, as an alternative to standard full or part-time study. You can find more information on the ‘Study by credit accumulation’ webpages: www1.essex.ac.uk/quality/university_policies/credit-accumulation.asp

Individual modules can yield 15, 20, 30 or 40 credits depending upon which department you are studying in. Each award has a defined structure, normally consisting of a combination of core, compulsory and optional modules, and requires a specific volume of credit to be achieved:

- Graduate/Postgraduate Certificates - 60 credits (all taught module credits)
- Graduate/Postgraduate Diplomas - 120 credits (all taught module credits)
- Masters Courses - 180 credits (normally 120 credits of taught module credits and a 60 credit dissertation or equivalent)

Credit is awarded for successful completion of individual modules. Students taking a credit-accumulation route of study register for the separate modules individually and accumulate the required volume of credit for the relevant award, including the dissertation if necessary. You will be given a different registration number for each module.

The Rules of Assessment are different when you study individual modules; make sure you check the relevant Rules of Assessment for the award you’re studying towards.

You will have a maximum of six years to study (this is usually five years with a sixth year for a dissertation). We measure the six years from the first module you register on towards the award. You can find out more information here: www.essex.ac.uk/students/exams-and-coursework/ppg/pgt/modular and you should talk to your tutors about fees, and applying accumulated credit towards an award.

Exit awards
If you are unsuccessful in achieving the number of credits required for the qualification for which you are registered, the Board of Examiners will consider whether you have sufficient credits to be awarded a lower award.

If you need further information, please see the Graduate Director Taught or Graduate Administrator.

Notification of Results
After the meeting of the Examination Board, usually in week 38 (during the summer term) and in week 8 (during the autumn term), the results will be available.
NB students are required to keep all assessed coursework until six months after the conferment of their degree.

Issuing Degree Transcripts
A transcript detailing your final taught degree result will be provided after the Examination Board meeting (usually in week 8 during the autumn term) has taken place. Further copies can be obtained via myEssex.

Extenuating circumstances are circumstances beyond your control which cause you to perform less well in your coursework than you might have expected www.essex.ac.uk/students/exams-and-coursework/ext-circ.aspx. In general, extenuating circumstances will be of a medical or personal nature that affect you for any significant period of time and/or during the assessment. You need to submit your form by the deadline given here – https://www1.essex.ac.uk/students/exams-and-coursework/ext-circ.aspx.

You will not get extra marks if you submit an extenuating circumstances form. Boards of Examiners use other methods to take into account extenuating circumstances, such as permitting further reassessment opportunities for uncapped marks.

You should read the guidance on extenuating circumstances very carefully before submitting your form and evidence. Seek advice from Students’ Union Advice (www.essex.su/advice) or the Student Services Hub (www.essex.ac.uk/students/contact/default.aspx).

Thinking of leaving or taking a break from your studies?
You may experience doubts at some point during your studies, if you’re thinking about leaving Essex, we’re here to support you and give you the advice you need to help you make an informed choice.

Intermission is a temporary withdrawal or leave of absence from the University and provides you with the opportunity to take a break from your studies. Normally, this is for reasons beyond your control (e.g. health or personal problems) although other reasons are permitted. Intermission must be approved by the University first, so if you are thinking about intermitting, we strongly advise you to contact your department and your Student Services Hub to talk to one of our advisers.

You should also read our guidance on intermitting very carefully at www.essex.ac.uk/see/intermit. If your intermission is agreed to, we will also give you the advice and support you need to help you carry on with your studies.

Withdrawing is the formal process for permanently leaving your programme of study and the University. If you are thinking of withdrawing, you should seek advice from your Department or the Student Services Hub at the earliest opportunity. It is very important that you discuss your circumstances with the University and follow the formal procedure for withdrawing. If the university is not formally notified, then you may risk continuing to incur further tuition or accommodation fees. More advice and information is available at www.essex.ac.uk/see/withdraw.
Academic Offences Policy

The University expects students to act with honesty and integrity in relation to coursework, examinations and other assessed work, and to follow our conventions for academic writing (including appropriate referencing of sources) and ethical considerations. If you don’t meet these expectations, then you may be charged with having committed an academic offence, a matter the University takes very seriously.

It is your responsibility to make yourself aware of the regulations governing examinations and how to correctly prepare your coursework. An academic offence can take place even if you didn’t mean to commit one, and examples include plagiarism, falsifying data or evidence, and communicating with another candidate in an examination.

If you aren’t sure what the conventions are, particularly in relation to referencing, you should ask your department, contact the Talent Development Centre, and also refer to Referencing and good academic practice in this handbook.

More information about academic offences and getting support can be found at: www.essex.ac.uk/see/academic-offence

Referencing and good academic practice
Respecting authorship through good academic practice is one of the key values of higher education in the UK.

The University takes academic offences very seriously. You should read the sections of this handbook which refer to referencing, coursework and examinations very carefully.

Referencing is a key academic/scientific skill. It is how you will acknowledge all sources used within a piece of work. You must reference all works used directly (quotes) and indirectly (paraphrasing and summarising).

Referencing allows you to give credit to authors'/researchers' concepts and ideas/ideas and results, demonstrate your breadth of reading and knowledge on a subject, direct readers to your sources, and avoid plagiarism.

You should always use the best available sources of evidence, such as peer reviewed journals and recognised books. To find out about your departmental referencing style, MHRA and for help with referencing, visit the library website: libwww.essex.ac.uk/referencing.htm

More information about academic offences and getting support can be found at: www.essex.ac.uk/see/academic-offence

Freedom of speech policy and Code of Conduct

For regulations relating to the Code of Student Conduct, see the University’s website: www.essex.ac.uk/students/study-resources/handbooks/default.aspx https://www.essex.ac.uk/governance/regulations

Appeals procedures

Appeals and complaints

Appeals on academic grounds can be made following the meeting of the Board of Examiners. If you have any concerns about the quality and standards of your course, please contact your student rep, your Head of Department or the Students’ Union.
Appeals, complaints, and fitness to practise

Appeals on academic grounds can be made following the meeting of the Board of Examiners and the publication of your results. Be aware that there are strict deadlines for the submission of the appeal form and your evidence.

We strongly advise all students thinking about making an appeal to contact Students’ Union Advice.

You may not appeal against academic judgement. This means that you can’t appeal against the marks you have been given by a Board of Examiners without evidence of extenuating circumstances or procedural irregularity.

More information about appeals, including the deadlines and forms to complete, can be found online at: www.essex.ac.uk/see/appeals

Making a Complaint: The University is a large community engaged in many activities of both an academic and non-academic nature. From time to time, you may feel dissatisfied with some aspect of your dealings with the University and, when that happens, it is important that the issue is dealt with constructively and as quickly as possible without risk of disadvantage or recrimination.

A complaint is defined as the expression of a specific concern about matters that affect the quality of a student’s learning opportunities (this is in line with the QAA Quality Code for Higher Education, Chapter B9: Academic Appeals and Student Complaints). The University aims to resolve complaints quickly and informally. You can find the complaints procedure and the forms here: www.essex.ac.uk/see/complaints

Student representation and feedback

The Department is keen to know the views of its students. There are several mechanisms for formal student representation:

Student representation, Student Staff Liaison Committees, Student Assessment of Modules and Teaching and Student Surveys

Student feedback is a vital part of the University's approach to quality assurance and enhancement. It is therefore important that you are given the opportunity to feedback and that you take time to feedback to the University. You can do this in a number of ways:

You can contact (or volunteer to be) a student representative who represent the voice of fellow students in departmental Student Staff Liaison Committees (SSLCs) and other University level committees.

www.essexstudent.com/representation/coursereps/www.essex.ac.uk/quality/student_representation/student_rep.asp www.essex.ac.uk/quality/student_representation/sslcc.asp
Every year, we will ask you to complete the Student Assessment of Module and Teaching (SAMT). This survey will be summarised and discussed by SSLCs and will inform reports written by us for central University committees as part of our quality assurance processes.
4. Practicalities and support information

Registration, enrolling and transcripts
All new and returning students are required to register at the start of each academic year. The process for new students includes activating an IT account, completing Pre-Arrival Online, and attending the University’s main registration event.
New students: www.essex.ac.uk/students/new/registration.aspx

Returning students are required to complete Online Registration. In addition to this, returning students who hold Tier 4 visas are required to complete a document check in person at the University’s main registration event. Returning students: www.essex.ac.uk/students/course-admin/registration.aspx

Privacy statement
Under the Data Protection Act 1998, any individuals about whom the University may be holding personal data have the right to access the data that is being held about them. Full details about how this works, and how to request such information are available on the Records Management web pages, see: ‘How to access your personal data’.

Support services

Wellbeing, counselling and confidential issues
If you need practical advice, a confidential conversation, or general information and guidance on University life, the Student Services Hub is the place to go. Ask us about your health and well-being, accommodation, money matters and much more. Your questions matter and you’ll get answers from our team of experts.
askthehub@essex.ac.uk
www.essex.ac.uk/students/contact
Your Student Services Hub provides advice, information and support on a range of health and wellbeing issues.
www.essex.ac.uk/students/health-and-wellbeing
Money matters
If you get into financial difficulty get help and talk to someone as soon as possible. The sooner your problem is identified, the sooner it can be solved. Advisers in our Student Services Hub and our independent SU Advice Centre can listen and talk you through the issues.

Nightline
Established at Essex in 1970, Nightline is a friendly help and support service run by students, for students. We work under strict confidentiality ensuring complete anonymity, and we’re always willing to listen. From tea and toast to campbeds, whether you’re waiting for a taxi, need a revision break, or just want to chat, pop in or call us.

Residence Life
Our Residence Life team is here to help you settle in and support you during your time living on campus. Each residents’ assistant (RA) is assigned an area and will aim to get to know you and organise a range of social activities. Plus they can help if you’ve got any concerns or complaints. Residence Life operates outside of office hours when other University support services are closed.

Disabled students
We would encourage all new students with a disability, long term medical condition, specific learning difficulty or mental health difficulty to disclose and register with the Student Services Hub so that we can plan how best to support you in your studies.

You can find out about the support we offer here:
www.essex.ac.uk/students/contact/help.aspx

UK students may be eligible for a Disabled Students’ Allowance grant. See our webpages for more information, including application forms and key changes:
www.essex.ac.uk/students/disability/funding.aspx
Information for international students
We are proud to be a global community and we recognise that living and studying in the UK may be very different from your own country.
Essex has a wide range of support covering academic and health and wellbeing issues. Our friendly and professional staff will be able to guide, give advice and assist you during your time at Essex.
You can find helpful information here - www.essex.ac.uk/students/new/international/default.aspx

If you are studying on a Tier 4 visa, don't forget to read the section on Tier 4 Information of this handbook which has further information and links.

Mature students
We appreciate that studying as a mature student can present challenges. This is particularly true if this is your first experience of higher education and you have other commitments and responsibilities to meet such as work and family. We want you to be aware of the support available so that you can make the most of your time at Essex.

You can find more information here: www.essex.ac.uk/students/groups/mature-students.aspx

Religion, faith and beliefs
We’re proud of our vibrant and diverse multicultural community and we recognise and support the many different religions and beliefs on campus. The calm, friendly and supportive atmosphere in our Multi-Faith Chaplaincy is a welcoming place for staff, students and the wider community to meet, interact and engage with each other.

Health and safety and on campus
Our campuses are generally very safe environments. We want to ensure that things stay this way. In order to achieve this we work closely with local agencies including the police and borough councils. Take a look at our website for general advice and information.
https://www1.essex.ac.uk/students/campus/health-and-safety.aspx

Please read the emergency evacuation notice in your accommodation, work or study location for fire safety procedures. If you have a permanent or temporary disabilities that may mean you have difficulty in evacuating one or more areas, you can arrange for a Personal Emergency Evacuation Plan (PEEP).

Writing Skills
Extra help is available on a one-to-one basis to all MA students who would like to improve their writing (including grammar and punctuation) or other academic skills, all year round. Inquire at the Talent Development Centre helpdesk in the Silberrad Student Centre to book an advice session.

Career Planning
As an Essex Masters student you can make use of all the support available from the Employability and Careers Centre while studying, and after graduation.

Financial support for postgraduate students
Postgraduate students are entitled to help with photocopying. Each student will receive photocopying cards to the total value of £12, to be used in the Department student photocopier, during the course of their degree.
- Full-time students - cards are given out twice during the year.
- Part-time students - cards are given out at the beginning of their first and second year.
- Modular Study - cards are given out over the period of their studies.

Funding Information
As well as the funding opportunities information, which is included in the Department's postgraduate application pack, information about funding opportunities is placed on the History website and on the postgraduate noticeboards, which are located near the History Office. In addition to the Grants for History publication, a file – ‘Postgraduate Funding’ – that contains information regarding sources of funding for postgraduates is available in the History Department Office.

For taught MA students planning to embark on a further research degree, there will be a meeting to discuss funding early in the spring term.

IT and educational support
Library Services
At our Colchester Campus, the Albert Sloman Library on Square 5 has a variety of study spaces over six floors, including 24/7 facilities and group work areas. The Library offers a wide range of learning resources, online and in print, with a dedicated Helpdesk, overnight chat service and the opportunity to book appointments with your Subject Librarian to help you through your studies and beyond (libwww.essex.ac.uk).
The library has a team of Subject Librarians who can help you to find appropriate resources for your assignments and show you how to search effectively. They can also provide advice on referencing and how to avoid plagiarism, using reference management software, and evaluating sources. Your Subject Librarian is Esther Wilkinson – contact her at ewilkin@essex.ac.uk, or use the Book a librarian form on the Library website to get in touch. More information can be found at http://libwww.essex.ac.uk/subject.htm

For guidance in relation to third-party proofreading of student work: www.essex.ac.uk/proofreading

Information on periodicals and databases relevant to History, and also links to internet resources useful to History students are available from the History subject resources page on the Library website at http://libwww.essex.ac.uk/Subject_Guides/hist.htm.

Collections of primary source materials are available from some Library databases, such as Early English Books Online, Eighteenth Century Collections Online, Empire Online and Defining Gender. All of these databases are available through the catalogue or from the Electronic Resource & Database Menu on the Library website: http://libwww.essex.ac.uk/eres.htm

IT support, wifi, email account, free MS office, computer labs, m:drive
Visit our website to set up your IT account and password, register an external email address and passphrase and request a reminder for a forgotten passphrase: www.essex.ac.uk/it/getaccount.

You must change your password within four weeks of your account being created, and then once every four months after that. The easiest way to change your password is online at: www.essex.ac.uk/password.

Once you’re set up, you can access email, log on to lab computers, connect to eduroam Wi-Fi and much more.

As part of your Office 365 email account you get 1TB cloud storage space for all your documents with OneDrive. OneDrive lets you create, edit, and share documents online. You also get at least 300 MB of local storage, known as your M: drive. You can access this by going to ‘My Documents’ on any lab computer.

Visit the IT Services website for helpful information, including how-to guides, answers to frequently asked questions, and links to video screencasts. www.essex.ac.uk/it

If you can’t find what you’re looking for, or if you need to talk to someone, then you can get help from the IT Helpdesk in the Silberrad Student Centre. Open Monday to Thursday 8.30am to 6.00pm, and Friday 8.30am to 5.45pm.

If you need to use a computer on campus our computer labs are the perfect place to study or work. Many labs stay open until late and some are open 24/7. For computer lab locations, opening hours and real-time availability, study pod groups, software, computer servers and assistive technology please view: www.essex.ac.uk/it/services/computers-and-software/default.aspx

The myEssex student portal myEssex is your online account. Use it to see your timetable, keep your personal details up-to-date, see how you’re doing on your course, let us know if you’ll miss a lecture or class, contact the Student Services Hub and much more. https://www.essex.ac.uk/myessex/

Moodle and FASER
We use Moodle as our online learning environment, to enhance face-to-face teaching. It lets you get to course materials, and has built-in features to enhance learning such as discussion forums, chat facilities and wikis. Moodle also links to the online reading lists via the Library.

FASER is our online coursework submission and feedback system. Use it to check coursework deadlines, upload coursework and receive electronic feedback all in one place.

Tier 4 Information
If you are a citizen of a country that is not part of the European Economic Area or Switzerland it is likely that you will require a visa to enter or remain in the UK to study. The University must ensure all students hold the right to study in the UK throughout their studies and there are regulations regarding your Immigration status. For Tier 4 students, the Home Office attach conditions to your Tier 4 leave that restrict study, work and access to state benefits, some nationals have to register with the Police. The University has many duties as a Tier 4 sponsor and must ensure we remain compliant in order to retain our Tier 4 licence. The type of visa you need to apply for will depend on your circumstances including what passport or travel document you hold, the length of your proposed study and where you are applying from. Find out more on the University’s website at: www.essex.ac.uk/immigration/ and www.essex.ac.uk/about/governance/regulations.
Find Your Way and room numbering system
Find Your Way is our interactive campus map app. Download it to help you find any location on campus and get directions quickly and easily. There’s also a handy web version - https://findyourway.essex.ac.uk/

If you’re looking for a specific room, follow these rules.

If the room number has three parts and the first is alphabetical e.g. TC.1.20 then the room is in one of the outer buildings. The format is building.floor.room. The first part indicates the building - “TC” is the Teaching Centre and “LH” is the Ivor Crewe Lecture Hall. The second part tells you the floor and the third the room number. For example, LH.1.12 is Ivor Crewe Lecture Hall, floor 1, room 12.

If the number has three parts and the first contains numbers and letters e.g. 5N.7.16, then the room is in square 4 or 5. The format is entrance.floor.room. The first part tells you the square and corner (e.g. 4S is the south corner of square 4), which matches the labels on the entrances (e.g. door 4NW is next to The Store). The second part is the floor and the third part the room. For example, 5NW.6.12 is in the north-west (NW) corner of Square 5 (entrance "5NW"), floor 6, room 12.

If the number has two elements and the second element has three digits e.g. 4.722, the room is in the Maths/Social Studies/Rab Butler/Square 1 building area. The first number shows the floor and the last three digits show the room number.

Also... if the last three digits are 700-799 the room is off Square 1, and if the last three digits are 500-599 the room is in the Square 2 area (Computer Science). For example, 5.512 is room 512, floor 5.

On-campus facilities
There is a broad range of facilities to support your living and learning experience at our Colchester Campus – including study-based services like the IT helpdesk and group study pods, but also various food and drink venues, three banks, a general store run by the Students’ Union, a printing and copy centre, market stalls each Thursday, a Post Office, launderettes, and much, much more. Full details on all on-campus facilities feature on our student webpages and in the campus guide you received with your welcome information when you joined us as a student member.

Frontrunners
Challenge yourself. Frontrunners is Essex’s unique on-campus work placement scheme for students. You’ll get the chance to work on real projects in real workplaces and develop real skills for you to brag about on your CV. You’ll get fully trained in your role and you’ll get paid for it.  https://www1.essex.ac.uk/ftronrunners/

Student ambassadors
Be a Student Ambassador and make a difference to others and make a difference on your CV! Student Ambassadors help to promote the University and higher education. You’ll be a valued part of the Student Recruitment and Outreach teams. Keep an eye out for Student Ambassador vacancies on CareerHub+ at the start of the Autumn Term.  https://www1.essex.ac.uk/careers/job_hunting/on_campus.aspx

Volunteering
Join the vTeam and be the difference. There are plenty of opportunities to volunteer during your time at Essex. The vTeam, run by the Students Union, is a fantastic opportunity to meet new people, make friends, give something to the local community, and gain valuable skills.  www.essex.su/vteam

Voluntary roles in local museums
Pick up a leaflet about this scheme in the Departmental Office or Common Room, or check out the careers and volunteering noticeboard. We have links with various local museums and other history related organisations which welcome enquiries from History students seeking voluntary work experience. The Department also has some money to help students with the costs of travel to gain voluntary work experience.

Essex Interns
Essex interns create paid internships exclusively for you as an Essex student. They’re flexible too; part time during term time or full time in vacations. You can even take part up to three years after you graduate, as part of our Essex graduates support package. Sign up for Essex Interns to kick-start your career.  www.essex.ac.uk/careers/internships

Postgraduate Conference
Each year the Department makes available a budget for our annual Postgraduate Conference. Postgraduate students in the Department are given the opportunity not only to present papers, but also to gain experience in conference administration and organisation. Recent conference themes have included ‘Creating the Other’, ‘Worlds of Violence’, ‘The Rude Body’ and ‘Scandalous Histories’.
Job References
Requesting references from members of staff
If you require a personal reference, always ask permission from a member of staff before giving their name as a referee. You should consider from whom it is most appropriate to request a reference and who will be best equipped to evidence your character and performance in the subject. It is helpful if you can provide the member of staff with details about the course or job you have applied for and, if relevant, a CV or other summary of your qualifications and experience. Please try to ask for references in good time – it is not always possible for a member of staff to write a reference immediately.

Copies of references
A copy of any reference provided will be retained within our department for no longer than three years for taught students and ten years for research students. If a reference is retained beyond this timeframe, our department will seek explicit consent from the student concerned.

Alumni
Essex is forever and although your time here will fly by, you’ll be part of this place for life. When you graduate, you’ll get an alumni card and join a community of 100,000 fellow graduates around the world. We’d love to keep in touch and invite you to our alumni events, networking and volunteering opportunities, as well as offer you special alumni benefits.

6. Appendix A
Guide to Writing Coursework

The guidance below will help you write essays and other similar pieces of coursework based on a structured argument supported by historical evidence. There are, of course, other types of coursework, such as document analyses, secondary source criticisms, pieces of empathy writing, and presentations. Please consult your module tutor for specific guidance on these, but please note that you should always follow the general principles outlined below, and especially the guidance on how to footnote your work and avoid plagiarism.

Reading for the Essay

A good essay, in part, rests on a broad range of reading. It is important to demonstrate a range of thought, and this can only come if you have read extensively and are not reliant on one or two works. Remember that work of quality derives from a critical engagement with the works you have read, where you show not only what you have learnt from the work, but also your ability to evaluate it. This means that when you are reading, you should attend both to the empirical content of the work, and to the methodology and approach of the historian, to the evidence deployed and to the mode of argumentation.

Do not simply look to length of bibliography, but to relevance. It is better to read four articles that address a particular essay topic, than seven textbooks, all of which give the same basic information (but better again to read ten or more items). Remember the vital importance of academic journals: these are the principal medium in which scholarly exchange takes place. You should form the habit from an early stage of consulting recent numbers of journals in the Current Periodicals section of the library: many journals are also available in the library, and online via the library website.

In starting to read for an essay, you are normally coming to a topic about which you know little or nothing. Begin by reading the relevant section of one or more textbooks that cover the topic in general terms. This will provide you with an overview of the subject. Do not dive into the more specialist literature (monographs and journals) until you have gained an overview. You can then begin to embark on more specialist monographs and journal articles. This means giving yourself time to plan and locate your reading.

Note-taking

Individuals collect and process information in differing ways, and the following can only be an outline of a system that works well for many people.

a) When you are reading a work, do not initially take any notes. Rather construct an index of themes that are suggested to you by the book or article. For an essay on ‘Why Did Revolution Occur in Russia in 1917’, some appropriate themes might be: a) the development of revolutionary organisations; b) the privations of war; c) the radicalization of workers and soldiers; d) the impoverishment of the peasants and their drive against landowners; e) the narrow social base of Tsarist support etc. Alongside these themes, jot down the pages of the work where the themes are dealt with and no more.
b) When you have finished reading the work, put it to one side, and write - merely on the basis of the index heads you have - your thoughts on each theme. Take each theme in turn and write what the work has suggested to you about it. When you have written that, and only then, turn back to the work, and look at the pages pertaining to the theme and write down in brackets after your treatment of the theme the page numbers that particularly have led you to your thoughts - sometimes its a few pages, sometimes it's a whole chapter. That way you can be sure to specify what your source is. At the same time, looking at those pages again - you will now simply be scanning - will allow you to pull out some key facts, quotations, statistics, always being careful to note on which pages these are to be found on and always being sure in your transcription that you know - through quotation marks - where you are using your words and where you are not.

c) When you have finished that theme, move on to the next and repeat the process.

d) Do not take voluminous notes - a scholarly article of 20 to 40 pages should not lead you to take more than 2 or 3 pages of notes. Do not forget that there are different modes of reading. Some sources must be read very closely; others - even rather large ones - can be scanned and gutted for what is relevant to your subject. It sometimes happens that a long work, because it is marginal to your essay topic, or because it is dealing with themes/evidence that you have picked up elsewhere, provides you with no more than a paragraph of notes.

e) Never take notes verbatim. Be vigilant about using your own formulations. This will help you to avoid the academic offence of plagiarism (for which, see below). Clearly indicate in your notes what is direct quotation, and what is paraphrase. Otherwise, you will be confused later on. If a chapter or article seems particularly relevant, photocopying it and highlighting the relevant sections can be a time-saving alternative to writing out large sections.

f) The Department is not allowed to set the same or similar questions for essays and examinations. Remember, therefore, that from the point of view of examinations, it is wise to take notes on the topic in all its different aspects, rather than to concentrate only on the particular aspect covered by the essay question. At the same time, when it comes to writing the essay, avoid the temptation to write on all aspects of the topic, rather than the actual question asked, simply to show how much you have read and understood.

Planning the Essay

Concentrate upon the question posed, which will in most cases reflect only one aspect of a larger historical topic. Reflect upon the ideas and information gathered in your notes, with a view to developing an argument around the question. Make sure that you are covering all the relevant issues connected with the question. Sometimes it is possible to refine an essay topic - e.g. by deciding to use one or two case studies to illuminate the question - but beware of trying to rewrite the question in such a way as to change its basic thrust. You will be marked on your ability to answer the question set - not one of your own devising (except, of course, where setting your own title is required by the module teacher). One way of ensuring that you construct an argument rather than write a report is to attend to the different interpretations or approaches of historians.

When thinking about the implications of an essay topic, consider different ways of approaching it, before plumping for a particular line of argument. Assess the relative strengths of different arguments, and weigh the evidence that can be mustered in support of them. Once you have chosen a line of argument, think of possible counter-arguments and counter-evidence. Do not be afraid to engage with these, or to incorporate elements of them into your own argument in order to qualify or expand it.

Write a plan, even if it is only very rough. If you cannot do this, it is a sign that you have not really thought through the implications of the question, or the argument you wish to make. You then need to refine your plan to ensure that there is a consistent development of your analysis throughout the essay.

Writing the opening paragraph

This should ‘unpack’ the problem or issues raised by the essay question, i.e. explain to the reader what the question is getting at. This might, for instance, entail explaining the importance of the topic; or a controversy among historians around the issue; or setting the issue in a wider historical and/or historiographical context in order to frame the question for the reader. You should, however, also avoid making the opening paragraph a catalogue of your intentions (‘I shall first discuss...then go on to discuss’ etc.). This should be unnecessary, since your argument ought to emerge clearly from the essay. It is, however, acceptable (but not obligatory) to summarise your thesis (i.e. your answer to the question) at the end of the opening paragraph.

Arguing effectively

Plan your argument and argue it in a consistent manner. Imagine that you are trying to persuade a somewhat sceptical reader, less informed than yourself but not completely uninformed, of the validity of your argument. Effective argument depends on evidence to support its points and on logical exposition. If you say something with which a reasonable person might disagree, clinch the point by citing examples and by offering supplementary argumentation. Remember that this may mean refuting counter-evidence and counter-argument. By all means express disagreement with authorities, but do so in an informed and rational way. Avoid expressing bombastic, unsubstantiated opinions. Choose examples that are telling ones. Do not make sweeping generalisations. Do not labour the obvious.

Remember that most essays are, in large part, concerned with explanation: demonstrating why something in the past happened. Do not be content simply to list different factors, causes or trends. Try to rank them in order of importance. Do not be content to amalgamate different historians’ explanations: look out for incompatibility and disagreement between them. Be critical of the explanations proffered by the historians you read. Be prepared to reject their explanations by scrutinising their methodology, mode of argumentation, or evidence deployed.

Writing in paragraphs

A paragraph should mark a new stage in your argument. It should have a main point, which should be illustrated with evidence, and be backed up with supplementary argumentation. It is appropriate to include additional points in the same paragraph if they relate to the main point, but a new stage in the argument - a full pause for breath - means that it is time to begin a new paragraph. You should never write single-sentence paragraphs, just as you should never write two-page paragraphs. The logical link with the preceding paragraph should always be clear to the reader.

Concision

We give you word limits because quality of thought is related to concision. Never write a single word more than is required by your argument. Go through your essay after you have drafted it, striking out anything that is not essential.
Writing the concluding paragraph

This should draw the threads of your argument together. If you have not stated your thesis in the opening paragraph, you should do so succinctly at this point; if you have, it is not inappropriate to restate it. A conclusion is also the place where you may wish to reflect more widely on the subject of the essay - place it in a broader context, look beyond the time-frame of the essay - or to acknowledge continuing problems in existing interpretations.

Use of historical evidence

Successful argument relies on the effective use of evidence. This may take the form of reference to particular events, to what historical actors said or did, to the extant sources, such as documents, statistics or visual material and, very commonly, to the sense you have derived from secondary works of the operation of specific ‘factors’, trends or whatever. In most of your essays you will be dependent on secondary sources (other publications on the same or related subjects) for evidence. Remember that such evidence has been selected from the historical record and utilised for particular ends by the historian whose work you are using. Treat it, therefore, with a degree of scepticism. Remember, too, that historians construct their narratives on the basis of a diverse body of primary material: manuscripts, official records, contemporary accounts, press reports, diaries, interviews etc. Think about the strengths and limitations of different types of evidence, about the different ways that evidence is used in secondary works, and about your own use of evidence in essays. Evidence should be typical, not untypical; it should be ‘objective’, not subjective; it should be selected with a view to persuading and enlightening the reader; it should be suited to the argument you wish to make.

Conveying a sense of historical change

You should not need to be reminded that the essay is primarily an analytical rather than a narrative vehicle. Particular problems can arise, however, when trying to combine an analytical structure with conveying to the reader a sense of how things changed through time. It is sometimes appropriate in the paragraph which follows your opening paragraph to offer the reader some brief (and the emphasis is on ‘brief’) overview of the period as a whole. You should try to find ways in the course of your analysis of reminding the reader of the basic course of events and of signalling how the analysis offered was influenced by the passage of time. It is not acceptable to range back and forth through time, heedless of whether generalisations made for one period hold for another. This is not just a problem that arises if you are dealing with a long span of time. In periods of revolutionary change, for example, events become accelerated, and a generalisation, which holds at one moment, may not be valid for the situation three months later. There are no easy solutions to this problem of combining a sense of chronological change with analytical coherence, but you should think about it when planning the essay.

The use of a quotation

1 Avoid quotation as a way of conveying information. Look carefully at the function of the quotation in this invented extract from an essay:

   By the 1930s Soviet workers had lost many of their rights. As V. Andrle writes, ‘Managers were often unable to provide everything the workers were entitled to under the rules; workers often had to be asked to work without prescribed safety clothing and devices, to tolerate delays in payment of wages, and to work at a hectic pace during “storming” periods.’
This is not a good use of quotation, since Andrle is here conveying basic information, rather than expressing an opinion. You should not use a quotation as a short cut to recounting the information in your own words.

2 The correct use of quotation. It is best to quote directly from a historian’s work only if you wish to endorse, draw attention to, or take issue with the opinion expressed. Thus it would be appropriate to quote Andrle in the following way:

In late-imperial Russia the intelligentsia played a more significant role than its counterpart in Britain or the USA. As Andrle suggests, ‘in tsarist Russia the intelligentsia rather than the entrepreneurial bourgeoisie defined the values of progress’.

Here you are using the opinion of an authority to strengthen your point. Note, however, that this does not necessarily establish its correctness: to do that you will need to cite evidence in support of it.

3 Avoid quotation as a substitute for historical argument. There is a tendency on the part of some students to support their argument not with evidence and examples but with the opinions of the historians they have read. In the worst cases, whole essays consist of stitched-together quotations. Such appeal to ‘authority’ (i.e., the opinion of another historian) does not constitute adequate substantiation of an argument. This is an issue on which there is possibly a difference in convention between history and other social sciences, so joint-honours students, in particular, should be aware of different disciplinary conventions. In a sociology essay, for example, it might be acceptable to argue in the following fashion:

Racism in Britain is, as Cohen notes, ‘not something tacked on to English history, by virtue of its imperialist phase, one of its aberrant moments; it is constitutive of what has become known as the “British way of life”’. Or as Gilroy points out: ‘Racism is not a unitary event based on a psychological aberration nor some historical antipathy to blacks. It must be understood as a process’.

Generally, in a historical essay you would not be advised to construct an argument in this way, i.e. by direct quotation of secondary authors, though it would be all right to cite their opinions if you wished to take issue with them. Contrast the following examples:

Why were Communists so prominent in the movements of resistance to the Axis powers during the Second World War?

M. R. D. Foote says that they ‘alone had foreseen the possibility of a resistance war’.¹ Meanwhile, E. J. Hobsbawm suggests that the ‘communists took to resistance, not only because Lenin’s “vanguard party” structure was designed [for] efficient action, but because extreme situations, such as illegality, repression and war, were precisely what these bodies of “professional revolutionaries” had been designed for.’²

Here the mode of argument is similar to that of the sociology example, and relies on appeal to authority. It makes no reference to concrete examples or events. Compare the following:

Why were Communists so prominent in the movements of resistance to the Axis powers during the Second World War? One can adduce four reasons. First, the disciplined structure of the Leninist ‘vanguard party’ was ideally suited to situations of war and repression, in a way that mass social-democratic parties were not. Indeed in Denmark the Social Democratic government, which was in office when Germany invaded, actually remained in place for the duration of the war. Second, the internationalism of the Communist parties allowed them to mobilise those who were more responsive to a message of anti-fascism than patriotism, such as the 12,000 Spanish Civil War refugees in south-western France. Third, the bravery, self-sacrifice and ruthlessness of many Communists was an inspiration to their fellow citizens, as the Yugoslav, Milovan Djilas, brings out in his memoir, Wartime. Finally, and perhaps most importantly, except in their Balkan strongholds, the Communists made no attempt to establish revolutionary regimes, being strongly supportive of broad anti-fascist alliances and coalition governments (in 1945 British Communists were opposed to the break-up of the Churchill wartime coalition).

The second example is more effective, since it relies both on an explanatory argument and on the use of evidence. It relies entirely on Hobsbawm, so his work is cited as a footnote.

4 The technicalities of quotation. Note that both the above quotations are properly footnoted. Look at the first example, and you will see that if you wish to skip over part of a sentence or paragraph in a quotation, you indicate this by three spaced dots... or four if you run over the end of a sentence. Words added within quotations are indicated by square brackets.

5 You must show clearly the distinction between your own work and the words or ideas of others. Short quotations from other writers need quotation marks (inverted commas), followed by a footnote. Long quotations are indented as a block without quotation marks, and followed by a footnote. In typed essays, your paragraphs are double-spaced, while indented block quotations are single-spaced. Summaries based on others’ work should also be footnoted, as in the last example above, based on Hobsbawm.

Stylistic advice

The following are some of the rules George Orwell recommended in his ‘Politics and the English Language’ (1946):

• Never use a long word where a short one will do.
• If it is possible to cut out a word, always cut it out.
• Never use the passive where you can use the active.
• Never use a foreign phrase, a scientific word or a jargon word if you can think of an everyday English equivalent.
• Break any of these rules sooner than say anything outright barbarous.

In general you should:

1 Try to adopt a clear, expressive use of English. Good grammar, syntax, spelling and punctuation will indicate to the reader that you have thought about how the language is used, and will give you greater powers of expression and analytical precision. Carefully chosen words, well-constructed sentences and correct punctuation aid the flow of thought and make what you have to say more easily understood. If you find writing difficult, aim to be clear and simple, rather than convoluted and ‘sophisticated’.

2 Pause before you intrude your ego into the text. Conventions are a little more relaxed than in the past, but it is still preferred to avoid too ‘subjective’ a style.

3 Make sure you are consistent in your usage of ‘I’, ‘one’ or ‘the author’.

4 Avoid the use of abbreviations except in commonly accepted forms, such as the USA or UN. Do not use WW1. It is not good style to write ‘don’t’, ‘it’s’, ‘wasn’t’ etc.

5 Avoid using quirky, eighteenth-century-style capitalisation: ‘In the nineteenth century the development of Modern Industry led to increasing Social Differentiation’. Modern Industry and Social Differentiation - as abstract nouns - should be in lower case.

Equally, avoid the opposite error of putting proper names into lower case. ‘The peasants’ revolt of 1381 was sparked by protest against the poll tax’. Peasants’ Revolt should be in upper case here, and, arguably, so should Poll Tax. This is because the Peasants’ Revolt refers to a specific event, not the generic category of ‘peasant revolt’. And avoid: ‘Marie-Antoinette showed touching devotion to the French (sic) peasants’. You should not need reminding that in English, all names or adjectives referring to countries’ languages are put in the upper case.

6 The key words in titles should also go into upper case. Book titles should be italicised – ‘Karl Marx’s The Communist Manifesto appeared in 1848, shortly before revolution broke out in Paris.’ Titles of articles in journals or edited books should be placed in inverted commas – ‘Lenin’s “Theses on the Constituent Assembly”, published in Pravda 26 December 1917, argued that the Constituent Assembly did not represent the will of the workers and peasants.’

7 The apostrophe indicates possession. Note the difference between its use with singular and plural nouns. ‘The Emancipation Act of 1861 outraged the peasants’ sense of fairness’. Here ‘peasants’ is in the plural, and so the apostrophe comes at the end of the word (after the ‘s’ which denotes the plural form). ‘The landowner always listened to his bailiff’s advice.’ Here the ‘bailiff’ is singular, and the apostrophe comes before the ‘s’ to indicate possession.

8 Divide words at the end of a line only when the lines would be conspicuously uneven if the word were completed. If division is necessary, use the hyphen at the end of the line - never at the beginning of the following line. Words must be divided only at syllables. If you do not know where the syllables fall, look in a dictionary. Do not divide short words or leave one or two letters dangling on their own at the beginning or end of a line.

Punctuation

1 Punctuation is important as an aid to comprehension. Poor punctuation makes it hard for the reader to grasp immediately what you are trying to say.

2 Think about commas. One way to test out your use of commas is to read your essay through to see if you would actually pause where you have put a comma. Avoid very long sentences broken up solely by commas. Learn to employ semi-colons and colons: they have their uses – as do dashes (and brackets). Throughout this section, colons and semi-colons have been deliberately used, and it would pay you to look closely at the functions they perform. If you find it difficult to use semi-colons or colons properly, stick to short sentences.

Spelling

While nothing under the sun is perfect, errors in typing, spelling and punctuation annoy readers and may adversely affect the mark given. Therefore, when in doubt, use a dictionary or a guide to English usage.

FOOTNOTING YOUR WRITTEN WORK

PLAGIARISM

You must provide references in the form of footnotes or endnotes when you write essays and other types of coursework. A key function of the footnote is to avoid plagiarism. To plagiarise is to give the impression that you have written or thought something that you have in fact borrowed from someone else. To do this is considered a violation of the professional responsibility to acknowledge ‘academic debts’. In its most blatant form, it entails reproducing someone else’s words more or less verbatim, and presenting them as your own. Please note that the Department uses Turnitin’s OriginalityCheck to check students’ work for improper citation or potential plagiarism by comparing it against the world’s most accurate text comparison database. We do not currently allow students to submit their own work through Turnitin.

The University regards both conscious and unconscious acts of plagiarism as equally problematic; it is your responsibility to make yourself aware of what constitutes plagiarism and to make sure that you avoid it. The University treats plagiarism as an academic offence and anyone found guilty of committing plagiarism risks being sanctioned: for more details, see the section on Academic Offences.

1 To avoid plagiarism, footnotes are needed for all direct quotations and for all statements of opinions derived from written sources, in fact, anything that is not your own idea. They should appear at the bottom of the page. Footnotes are numbered sequentially through the entire essay. In projects, separate sets of footnotes may be used for each chapter, or the whole can be numbered sequentially.

2 Once you have cited a reference in full - author, title, place and date of publication - merely cite it in an abbreviated form thereafter, giving the author’s surname and a shortened version of the title. When two authors have the same surname, give their first names or initials to avoid confusion. The abbreviation Ibid. is used when citing the same work immediately after a full or abbreviated reference. If the page number is different, give the page number after Ibid. Avoid having too many *Ibid.*s in a row, however: often they can more effectively be combined into a single footnote.
Note the following usages that are particularly common in historical writing.

a) ‘The British Commander-in-Chief in the Far East referred to Japanese soldiers as “sub-human specimens”’. [Cited by C. Thorne, The Far Eastern War, p. 18]. Here you should cite the source of this bit of primary evidence. Since you have not read the speeches or diaries of the C-in-C concerned, you indicate that you are citing the primary evidence by way of a secondary source.

b) The business of ‘second-hand’ citation of primary sources can be a little complicated, and since it is often the primary source we wish to cite, you need to be clear about the conventions. Supposing you wish to quote Chairman Mao in an essay:

Mao Zedong liked to give his denunciations of the Soviet Union a homely flavour. ‘I couldn’t have eggs or chicken soup for three years because an article appeared in the Soviet Union which said that one shouldn’t eat them. Later they said one could eat them. It didn’t matter whether the article was correct or not, the Chinese listened all the same’.

If you found this quotation in a secondary source, rather than by reading Mao’s writings for yourself, you must indicate this to the reader. The simplest solution is probably: As cited in Jonathan D. Spence, The Search for Modern China (New York, 1990), p. 577.

If you look at Spence’s own footnote, of course, you will find the original source cited: Stuart Schram (ed.), Chairman Mao Talks to the People: Talks and Letters, 1956-1971 (New York, 1971), p. 98. If you wish, you may also cite this source, so long as you still indicate that it is ‘as cited in Spence’ (followed by the details). What you must not do is cite the original source without reference to Spence, as though you found it for yourself. Make it clear to the reader that the reference to a primary source comes via the secondary author.

This does not only apply to ‘second-hand’ citation of primary sources, but also to quotations from historians cited in other historians’ works (in the following example, all titles are fictitious).

REFERENCING STYLE

There are many different styles of referencing and footnoting that you will see in different publications. We would like you to use the following conventions, which are based upon the Modern Humanities Research Association Style Guide. You can access the full, definitive guide to referencing using this style at http://www.mhra.org.uk/style/11

Need help finding the way to reference something? The University Library has a subscription to the online service ‘Cite Them Right’ which will help you – just login via the library catalogue and select the MHRA style.

Many websites will automatically create references for you using a button called something like “Cite this” – just select the Modern Humanities Research Association style. Similarly, if you use referencing managing software like EndNote, Zotero, or Mendeley, this style is available for you to use automatically.
Form for books and pamphlets:

Name/Initials Surname, Title in Italics (Place of publication, Year of publication), p. xx. (a series of pages is pp. xx-xxi; several discrete pages is pp. 17, 35, 37).

If you wish, you can add the publisher’s name, but then you should do so consistently throughout.

Name/Initials Surname, Title in Italics (Place of publication: Publisher, Year of publication), p. xx.

For books purchased on Kindle and other electronic sources, use the following

Please note:
1. The punctuation of footnotes is as important as in an ordinary sentence. Pay attention to spaces and where the punctuation points are placed. Footnotes should always end with a full stop.
2. Page numbers may be abbreviated when a series is cited: e.g., rather than pp. 178-179, use pp. 178-9.
3. Usually, the author’s full first name is used when only one is given. If several forenames are given, initials can be used: e.g. P. J. Harvey; V. A. C. Gatrell.

Form for articles in journals:

The title of the article is placed in inverted commas; the title of the journal is italicised and must be followed by the number of the volume, date of publication, and page reference (using a ‘p.’ or ‘pp.’). When an article’s argument is summarised in its entirety, or you are referring to it in passing, use the full range of page numbers.

Form for articles/chapters from edited books:

Author, ‘Title in Inverted Commas’, in editor (ed.), Title of Book (Place, Date), p. x.

NB: (ed.) for one editor; (eds) for two or more.

Form for edited primary sources or translations:

This is where a manuscript source or printed work is (re)published or translated, often with an introduction, by a later editor.

Original author, Title of Work, ed./ trans. editor’s name (Place, Date).

Form for newspapers:

If the paper does not have page numbers, leave that part out.

Form for unsigned articles (encyclopaedias, weeklies, or anonymous books):

The Truth about Toad Hall (Balham, 1932), p. 73.

Form for original archival primary sources and manuscripts:

Location, Repository, Name of Collection, call number for box or volume, details of authorship or title of document, pages.

Kew, National Archives, Treasury Board Papers (T1): T1/4573, William Rickman to C. G. Trevelyar, 10 Feb. 1841.

Later references can be abbreviated:

TNA, T1/4573: Rickman to Trevelyar, 10 Feb. 1841.

Form for government publications:

You should ensure that you include all the information required to locate the specific document, which will probably include an internal archive reference.

Form for films and video:

Title (date), director.

Form for broadcasts:

References to television or radio broadcasts should give the title of the specific programme, if there is one, in single quotation marks, and the title of the series in italics, together with the date and (if relevant) the time of transmission. For example:

‘Green Shoots from the Arab Spring’, Analysis, BBC Radio 4, 12 November 2012.

Newsnight, BBC2, 2 November 2012, 10.30pm.

Form for online sources and databases:

All citations general items from the web should include the following information:

Author, title, print publication or photographic/graphic collection (if known) and URL of the specific text or graphic; title and URL of the website; and the date the document was retrieved. The URL should be enclosed within angle brackets ‘< >’ and the date accessed within square brackets ‘[ ]’.

For example:

John MacNamara, ‘Berry Picker’, The Nation, 139 (12 Sept. 1934),

In the case of primary sources, which have been scanned or transcribed on to the internet, it is important to give full details of the original document/graphic as well as the internet location, for example:

Robert Fechner to Robert J. Buckley, 4 June 1936, ‘CCC Negro Selection’ file, Box 700, General Correspondence of the Director, Record Group 35, National Archives and Record Administration, <http://newdeal.feri.org/texts/824.htm>. New Deal Network,

In the case of printed works that have been scanned into websites such as JISC Historical Texts, you should cite the publication according to its original format, but follow it with a note of where you accessed it (and when):

Form for blogs and social media:

Blog posts and general online articles should be cited by author, title in inverted commas, and URL, followed by date accessed. When no individual author is identifiable, it is acceptable to list the username or the publisher of the website.

Where the website gives the option, use a ‘permalink’, which is shorter and easier to read – you can often find these by clicking an option called something like “Share”.

Example of a blog:
Brodie Waddell, ‘What is microhistory now?’,https://manyheadedmonster.wordpress.com/2017/06/20/what-is-microhistory-now/> [accessed 22 August 2017]

References to online video and audio (e.g. YouTube, SoundCloud) should include the author, the title in italics, the type of source, the title of the website, the date of publication, the URL, and the date of access, e.g.:

Social networks can be problematic to reference, so you should try to both explain and quote as fully as possible in your reference. Remember to reference the original, not a reposting or re-sharing. For example:

Sarkozy’s campaign office made regular use of social media to push talking points from his stump speech, tweeting, for example: “J’ai besoin de vous. J’ai besoin de votre courage. J’ai besoin de votre énergie. J’ai besoin de votre enthousiasme.” #Bordeaux’ (@NicolasSarkozy, 3 March 2012)

Information Footnotes:

In general, if it is worth saying, it is worth putting in the text. Occasionally, a peripheral fact or a statement regarding an interpretation may be added to a footnote or become a separate footnote. For example, in a paper on fourteenth-century peasant revolts, this might appear as an informational footnote:

As late as the eighteenth century, Berkshire magistrates issued warrants for the arrest of Wat Tyler.

Repeat references:

Later references to a book or article used earlier may be shortened, but must still clearly identify the source. Usually it is easiest to use: Surname, Short Title, p. x.

Joll, Europe, p. 135.

If two authors you have used have the same surname, use an initial to make the difference absolutely clear.

J. Joll, Europe, p. 135.

FORMS OF REFERENCE: BIBLIOGRAPHY

At the end of the essay list all the books and articles which you consulted in the course of researching the essay on a separate sheet, even if you do not make direct reference to all of them. The bibliography should exist separately from the footnotes, and should be alphabetised according to the surname of the author. The entry for a book should list the author, title (italicised), place and date of publication (publisher can also be given). The entry for an article in a journal should list the author, title (in inverted commas), journal title (italicised), the volume and number of the issue. If the journal is not numbered by volumes, indicate the number of the issue and the year published. The entry for an article in an edited book should list the author of the article, the article title, the editor(s) of the book, the book title, and the place and date of publication.

If you have used several different types of sources, it is preferable to divide the bibliography into sections: e.g. ‘Primary Sources’; ‘Printed Primary Sources’; ‘Secondary Sources’.

Form for books

Form for articles

The page numbers covered by the article can be included if you wish.

If a number of articles from the same book are used, it is possible to cite the book only once:

Form for unpublished or manuscript sources

EITHER list collections alphabetically, with the archive in brackets, e.g.:

Sir Austin Chamberlain (University Library, University of Birmingham)

Norman Davis (Library of Congress, Washington D.C)

OR by archive, with individual collections then listed alphabetically, e.g.

Herbert Hoover Presidential Library, West Branch, Iowa
  William Castle
  Herbert Hoover, Presidential Papers Series
  Hugh Wilson
Form for published primary sources

Newspapers should be listed in alphabetical order; government publications should be listed alphabetically by government and originating department or agency, and then chronologically within each section.

Form for internet sources

Internet sources should be cited in the same way as in footnotes, but with the author’s surname listed first.

Further notes:

1. In History writing, dates take the form of 1 January 1672, with no internal punctuation (not 1st January, and not January 1). Abbreviations for months may be used in footnotes: 1 Jan. 1672.
2. Whichever system you follow for footnotes and bibliography, you must be consistent throughout.
3. References to notes taken during lectures or seminars: it is both unnecessary and inappropriate to include in your bibliography or footnotes references to notes taken during lectures or seminars. It is presumed that you have attended and profited from both forms of instruction and that what you have learned there has informed your approach to your essay. The only exception is when citing statistical information provided in a lecture.

Ethics

All research involving human participants, whether undertaken by the University's staff or students, must undergo an ethics review by an appropriate body and ethical approval must be obtained before it commences. You can find our Guidelines for Ethical Approval of Research Involving Human Participants here - www.essex.ac.uk/reo/governance/human.aspx - along with the Ethical Approval application form.

‘Human participants’ are defined as including living human beings, human beings who have recently died (cadavers, human remains and body parts), embryos and foetuses, human tissue and bodily fluids, and personal data and records (such as, but not restricted to medical, genetic, financial, personnel, criminal or administrative records and test results including scholastic achievements). Research involving the NHS may require and research involving human tissue or adults lacking capacity to consent will require Health Research Authority approval.’
